PROFILE

I am a front-end developer with a particular interest in creating intuitive and beautiful websites that are a pleasure for users to peruse.

I come from a background of working in office administration and sub-editing that has stood me in good stead for coding (especially when it comes to debugging). Prior to this I obtained a diploma in Applied Fashion, where I was always drawn to computer-aided design (CAD) both in developing clothing patterns and creating fashion illustrations.

I'm eager to keep learning new programming languages and to become a contributing member of the dynamic developer community.

Web Development Immersive 2017

- Working as an independent developer I created The Daily Move app, which accesses the Microsoft Kinect from within the browser. Users are required to perform physical exercises in order to read news articles accessed via the News API.
- As part of a team I helped build the Travelr social website which enables users to browse and comment on travel "Spots". Using the Google Maps and Flickr APIs, users can see photos that have been taken in proximity to a given Spot.
